THE OLD SCISSOR'S SOLILOQUY.

BY PARMENAS MIX.

I am lying at rest in the sanctum to-night—
The place is deserted and still;
To my right lie exchanges and manuscripts white—
To my left are the ink and the quill.
Yes, the quill, for my master's old-fashioned and quaint,
And refuses to write with a pen;
He insists that old Franklin, the editor saint,
Used a quill, and he'll imitate Ben.

I love the old fellow—together for years
We have managed the Farmers' Gazette,
And although I am old, I'm his favorite shears,
And can crowd the compositors yet.
But my duties are rather too heavy, I think,
And I oftentimes envy the quill
As it lazily leans with its nib in the ink
While I'm slashing away with a will.

But when I was new,—I remember it well,
Though a score of long years have gone by,—
The heaviest share of the editing fell
On the quill; and I think with a sigh
Of the days when I'd scissor an extract or two
From a neighboring editor's leader,
Then laugh in my sleeve at the quill as it flew
In behalf of the general reader.

I am being paid off for my merriment then,
For my master is wrinkled and gray,
And seldom lays hold on his primitive pen
Except when he wishes to say:
"We are needing some money to run this machine,
And subscribers will please to remit;"
Or, "That last load of wood that Jones bro't us was green
And so knotty it couldn't be split."

He is nervous and deaf, and is getting quite blind,
Though he hates to acknowledge the latter,
And I'm sorry to say it's a puzzle to find
Head or tail to the most of his matter.
The compositors plague him whenever they see
The result of a quickless endeavor,
But the darling old rascal just lays it to me,
And I make no remonstrance whatever.

Yes, I shoulder the blame—very little I care
For the jolly compositors' jest,
For I think of a head with its silvery hair
That will soon, very soon be at rest.
He has labored full long for the true and the good
'Mid the manifold trouble that irk us—
His only emolument raiment and food,
And a pass now and then to the circus.

Heigho! from the past comes a memory bright
Of a lass with the freshness of clover,
Who used me to clip from her tresses one night
A memorial lock for her lover.
That dear little lock is still glossy and brown,
But the lass is much older and fatter,
And the youth—he's an editor here in the town—
I'm employed on the staff of the latter.

I am lying at rest in the sanctum to-night—
The place is deserted and still,
The stars are abroad and the moon is in sight
Through the trees on the brow of the hill.
Clouds hurry along in undignified haste,
And the wind rushes by with a wail—
Hello! there's a whopping big rat in the paste—
How I'd like to shut down on his tail!

SUDDEN CHANGE OF FORTUNE.

A TRUE STORY.

Some sixty or seventy years ago, a vessel from Boston arrived at one of the wharves in London. Among the hands on board was one by the name of Tudor, a steady respectable and well looking young man, who acted in the capacity of both cooper and sailor. Very early one morning, and before any other hand than Tudor had come on deck, a young, beautiful, and tolerably well dressed female came tripping down the street to the vessel, and inquired of Tudor for the Captain. She was told that he had not yet arose, but she insisted upon seeing him without delay, and, with Tudor's permission, proceeded unaccompanied to his berth, and arousing him, addressed him with—

"Good morning, Captain. I have called to see if you will marry me?"

"Marry you?" replied the astonished Captain, believing her to be of a suspicious character, "leave the vessel instantly, if you know what is for your interest."

She then went to the mate's berth and asked if he would marry her, and received an answer similar to the Captain's; she then went upon deck where Tudor was engaged in some business, and put the question to him.

"With all my heart," answered Tudor in a half serious and half jocular manner.

"Then," said she, "come along with me.

Tudor left his work and followed her with motives which, he afterwards declared, he could never satisfactorily account for, even to himself. By the time they had reached the principal streets of the city, many of the shops had been opened. The lady entered a barber-shop, followed by Tudor, beckoned him to be seated, and ordered the knight of the razor to take off his beard and his hair, both of which operations he unquestionably stood greatly in need of. She footed the bill, and they both left the shop, but soon entered a hat store. She requested that the best lot of beaver hats in the store might be placed on the counter, and then told Tudor to select such a one as suited. He soon did this; the price was paid by the lady; Tudor threw aside his old tarpaulin, and left the store in company with his companion, in a beaver that would not have disgraced His Majesty the King himself. They visited a shoe store where Tudor was not long in selecting a pair of boots, nor the lady in paying for them.

Tudor by this time was puzzled to divine the object the lady had in view, and it must be acknowledged he was apprehensive all was not right; but, fully aware that he had committed no crime to make him dread the face of any mortal, and wishing to see the end of the farce which had been so fairly commenced, he was determined to press forward, prepared for the worst, trusting everything to his guide and companion. He solicited from the lady an explanation of her designs, but she told him to be silent and ask no questions, and immediately led the way into a clothing store with Tudor at her side. Here Tudor was told to select the best suit of clothes in the store that fitted him, with corresponding articles of clothing, and the sailor in his doublet, tar-bedaubed pantaloons, and checkered shirt, was in a few minutes metamorphosed into as fine a gentleman, as far as appearances were concerned, as had walked the streets of that metropolis for many a day.

The bill at this place as well as at the others, was paid by the lady.

Tudor's amazement was now complete. He knew not what to say or think. Who the lady was, and what her intentions were, he could not even surmise. He again asked her for an explanation, and insisted upon one; but the only answer he received was:

"Follow me and do not be alarmed—all will be explained hereafter to your entire satisfaction."

One thing Tudor was obliged to acknowledge—the lady, thus far, had done by him as he could have wished; he therefore resolved to ask no more questions, and to comply with her requests and demands. Presently she conducted him into a magistrate's office, and requested the minister of the law to unite her and her companion in matrimony. This was something of a damper to Tudor, but nevertheless he tacitly yielded; the ceremony was soon commenced, and in a few seconds the couple were pronounced man and wife!

Without uttering a word, or even exchanging a kiss, Tudor and his wife now left the magistrate's; but not, however, until she had given him a sovereign for his services. The couple passed through many streets in silence—Tudor hardly knowing what he was doing, or what he had done, and certainly ignorant of where he was going, or what awaited him; and of the thoughts that occupied his wife's mind, the reader will soon be able to judge for himself.

Turning the corner of a street, Tudor beheld, a few rods in front of him, a splendid building, towards which his wife seemed to direct her footsteps as well as his own, and into which, indeed, they soon entered. The room into which Tudor was ushered by his wife was furnished in a style of great magnificence. She set him a chair, telling him to make himself contented for a minute or two, and then passed into another room.

The first one here to address her was her uncle, who, on seeing her enter the room, jumped in astonishment from his chair, and, calling her by name, demanded how she had escaped from her room, and where she had been. Her only answer was:

"Thou fiend in human shape! I allow you just one hour to remove your effects from this house. The actual possession of my property here you have deprived me of, and vainly thought you had made arrangements by which you could deprive me of it through life; but I have frustrated your wicked designs. I am now mistress of my own house, for my husband is now in the front room!"

I must now leave the newly married couple for a short time, for the purpose of returning to the previous history of a very wealthy gentleman, whom I shall designate as Mr. A., not recollecting his actual name, and, for the same reason, shall give to his daughter the name of Eliza. He had spared neither time nor expense in the education of his daughter, she being the only object of his care and regard, his wife having died when she was quite young, and before his death, which took place when she was fourteen or fifteen years of age, he had the satisfaction of witnessing in her one of the most beautiful and accomplished young ladies of London. A short time previous to his death, an arrangement was entered into between Mr. A. and a brother of his, by which his brother was to have possession of his dwelling-house, his servants, horses, carriages and such other property as had been deposited in banks for the benefit of his daughter, till the time of her marriage, when the possession of them was to be given up to her husband. It was also a condition of the arrangement that, in case Eliza died without marrying, the property was to go to her uncle and his family.

Immediately after the death of Mr. A., his brother moved into his dwelling; Eliza boarded in his family, and everything went on agreeably for several months, when Eliza discovered in her uncle and his family, the manifestations that she should never marry—the reasons for which, from what has already been said, must be obvious to every reader. Unluckily for Eliza she did not discover the diabolical plot in season to frustrate it in its bud. It was nothing less than this: To shut her up in one of the centre rooms in the third story of the house; to prevent her leaving it by keeping the doors and windows strongly bolted; and to refuse her the company of her associates, by telling them, when they called, that she was either at school, or was at some of the shops on business; or had just stepped out to see a friend; or had taken a ride into the country for her health, and to see some of her relations, or telling them something else equally destitute of truth.

Eliza generally received her meals through a small door in the ceiling, from the hands of her unfeeling aunt, to whom her cries for liberation from her lonely, dismal prison house, were no more effectual than if they had been directed to the idle wind.

Three years was this unfortunate girl shut out from all communication with the world, when one morning her scanty breakfast was carried to her by an old female servant of her father. Eliza, once more discovering the face of her old friend and servant Juan, burst into tears and attempted several times to speak, but was unable to. Juan well understood the meaning of those incoherent sobbings, and said, herself almost unable to speak from emotion:

"Hush, hush, Eliza; Mistress speak not; I understand all. Your tyrant aunt was taken suddenly ill last night, and the doctor says it is doubtful whether she long survives. I will see you again at noon and at evening. Some of our old servants have long been planning means for escape, and are now in hopes of effecting it."

And without waiting for Eliza's thanks and blessings, she tripped down stairs.

"What?" she said to herself, "is it possible that I am to be delivered from this vile place of confinement? Is it possible that all connected with this establishment—my own establishment—do possess hearts of adamant? God speed thee, Juan, and thy associates, in thy work of love and mercy!"

It is unnecessary to detail all the minutia of the scheme for Eliza's escape, and the several interviews held between her and Juan for the three days she supplied Eliza with her meals. Suffice it to say, that on the evening of the fourth day after the interview, Eliza was furnished with an instrument to unbar the window, and was promised a rope ladder the following evening to effect her descent from one of the windows in the room adjoining; but having loosened the bars of the window the same evening the instrument for that purpose was put into her hands, she determined not to wait till the evening for the promised ladder, not knowing but the plot of the servants might be discovered by her uncle, or some of his children; and she accordingly went to work making a rope (if so it may be called) from her bed clothes, by tearing them into strips and tying them together. After a few hours' labor, she completed her rope, but fearing it might not be strong enough to support her, it was some time before she dared to attempt a descent. But preferring death to a longer confinement, and fearing that she might be detected, she resolved to make the attempt, resigning her fate into the hands of Him who is the orphan's friend. She did make the attempt, and was successful! Yes, she was now liberated from a prison in her own house—where, for "filthy lucre's sake," she had been confined by her own uncle—and once more breathed the pure air of freedom. This was about daylight. She immediately bent her steps towards the wharf, where the Boston vessel lay, and from that period in her life till she ushered her husband into her own house, the reader has already an account of.

The surprised and horror-stricken uncle stood in mute astonishment for some moments, after being informed by Eliza of her marriage. She again repeated the demand, "Leave my house in an hour, thou monster!" and then returned to her husband, where the promised explanation was made.

The amazement of Tudor, and the transports of his wife at this sudden change in their fortunes and conditions, may possibly be conceived, but they certainly cannot be expressed! Being incompetent to the task, I will not attempt to describe the scenes that successively followed—the embraces of that happy couple, and the kisses exchanged—the joy of the faithful servants at seeing their young mistress once more set at liberty—the chagrin, mortification and decampment of the inhuman uncle and his family, the parties that were given by Mrs. Tudor, as well as those attended by her and her husband, their many pleasant rides into the country, &c., &c.

One pleasant morning, four or five days after their marriage, the attention of the officers and hands belonging to the Boston vessel were directed to a splendid carriage drawn by two cream-colored horses, richly caparisoned, which was approaching the wharf, and in a few moments halted immediately in front of the vessel. The driver dismounted the box, and let down the steps of the carriage; a gentleman, gorgeously dressed, stepped out, and assisted a lady with corresponding habiliments to alight. They then stepped on board the vessel, when the gentleman asked the captain what port he was from, how many days he was performing the passage, when he intended to return; and receiving appropriate answers to the same, asked leave to examine the cabins and the other accommodations of the vessel, (all the while avoiding, as far as possible, the scrutiny of the captain), which was very courteously shown him. He then observed that he and his lady had some thoughts of starting for America, and in case they should do so, assured the captain they would take passage with him. They then left the cabin, but before leaving the vessel the gentleman turned to the captain and said, "Captain ———, (calling him by name.) before leaving your vessel permit me to make you acquainted with Mrs. Tudor."

It was not till this moment the captain and those around him recognized in the elegant dressed gentleman their old friend Tudor, the cooper! They supposed some sad, if not fatal, accident had befallen him.

The remainder of my important sketch is soon told. Tudor distributed his wages coming to him among his old associates, bade them good-bye, but not, however, until he had exacted a promise from the captain and crew to call as often as convenient upon him before sailing, left the vessel, entered his carriage and was driven to his own door.

Tudor and his wife lived through life upon the most amicable terms; were blessed with prosperity and an obedient and respected circle of children. Some years after his marrying he returned, accompanied by his wife, to his native place, Boston, where he built two or three wharves that bear his name to this day. They afterwards returned to London, where they died as they lived since their union, honored and respected by all who enjoyed their acquaintance. L.

Indians After an Honest Man.

Indians may be treacherous, but they can be honest; and who shall say how far the dishonesty of others has led to their treachery? They know when they are cheated, as our Government has found to its cost.

An old trader, who has established himself at what happened to be a favorable locality among the Northern Indians, tells a good story of his first trials with his red customers. Other traders had located in that same place before, but had not remained long. The Indians, who evidently wanted goods, and had money and furs, flocked about the store of the new trader, and carefully examined his goods, but offered to pay nothing. Finally their chief, with a large number of his tribe, visited him.

"How do, John?" said the chief. "Show me goods. Aha, I take that blanket for me, and that calico for squaw—three otter skins for blanket, and one for calico. Ugh! pay you by'm by—to morrow."

He received his goods and left. On the next day he returned with a large part of his band, his blanket well stuffed with skins of various kinds.

"Now, John, I pay."

And with this he drew an otter skin from his blanket and laid it on the counter. Then he drew a second, a third, and a fourth. A moment's hesitation, as though calculating, and he drew out a fifth skin—a very rich and rare one—and passed it over.

"That's right, John."

The trader instantly pushed back the last skin, with—

"You owe me but four. I want only my just dues."

The chief refused to take it, and they passed it several times back and forth, each one asserting that it belonged to the other. At length the dusky chieftain appeared to be satisfied. He gave the trader a scrutinizing look, and then put the skin back into his blanket. Then he stepped to the door and gave a yell, and cried out to his followers:

"Come; come and trade with the pale face, John. He no cheat Indian; his heart big."

Then turning back to the trader, he said: "Suppose you take last skin, I tell my people no trade with you. We drive you off like a dog, as we drive off others; but now you Indian's friend, and we be yours."

Before dark the trader was waist deep in furs, and loaded down with cash. He found that honesty had a commercial value with these Indians.

WHY PRESIDENT BUCHANAN REMAINED A BACHELOR.—In an elegant mansion near the Arlington Hotel, in Washington city, reside two ladies of the olden aristocracy—Mrs. Freeman and her sister, Miss Coleman. About the latter lady a little romance clings which makes her interesting. She was the second love and the affianced bride of the late President Buchanan, his first love having died in her youth, and until he met Miss Coleman he was almost a recluse from ladies' society. He was engaged to her when sent abroad as American Minister to the Court of St. James, in London, at which time Miss Coleman resided in New York. He returned to this country on a visit, and on the evening he arrived Miss Coleman was giving a grand entertainment. He was fatigued, and instead of dressing and paying his respects to her immediately, retired to his room, and early next morning called to see her. She had taken offence at his not calling the evening before and refused to see him, and they never met again. What regrets were felt the world has never known, but many an angry impulse has wrecked the happiness of men and women beyond reparation.

AN EXPENSIVE VISITOR.—A Benton county man hid $600 in a spare-room stove. The next day his wife's mother came down during his absence for a three weeks' visit and that spare room was warmed up for the first time in 300 years. And they say you can pick up shreds of that man's hair and clothes, where he clubbed himself around the country, when he heard of it, anywhere within ten miles of the house.

A STORY FOR THE TIMES.

One day the Duke of Buccleuch, a Scotch nobleman, bought a cow in the neighborhood of Dalkeith, where he lived. The cow was to be sent home the next day. Early in the morning as the duke was taking a walk in a very common dress, he saw a boy trying in vain to drive the cow to his residence. The cow was very unruly, and the poor boy could not get on with her at all. The boy not knowing the duke bawled out to him in broad-Scotch accent,—

"Hie, mum, come here, and gie's a hand wi' this beast."

The duke walked slowly on, not seeming to notice the boy, who still kept calling for help. At last, finding that he could not get on with the cow, he cried out in distress:

"Come here, mum, and help us, and as sure as anything I'll gie ye half I get."

The duke went and lent a helping hand.

"And now," said the duke, as they trudged along after the cow, "how much do you think you will get for the job?"

"I dinna ken," said the boy, "but I'm sure o' something, for the folks at the big house are guid to a' bodies."

As they came to a lane near the house, the duke slipped away from the boy and entered by a different way. Calling his butler he put a sovereign in his hand, saying,—"Give that to the boy who has brought the cow."

He then returned to the end of the lane where he parted from the boy, so as to meet him on his way back.

"Well, how much did you get?" asked the duke.

"A shilling," said the boy, "and there's the half o' it to ye."

"But surely you had more than a shilling?" said the duke.

"No," said the boy, "sure that's a' I got; and d'ye no think it's plenty?"

"I do not," said the duke: "there must be some mistake; and as I am acquainted with the duke, if you return, I think I'll get you more."

They went back, the duke rang the bell, and ordered all the servants to be assembled.

"Now," said the duke to the boy, "point me out the person who gave you the shilling."

"It was that chap there with the apron," said he, pointing to the butler.

The butler fell on his knees, confessed his fault, begged to be forgiven; but the duke indignantly ordered him to give the boy the sovereign and quit his service immediately. "You have lost," said he, "your money, your situation, and your character by your deceitfulness: learn for the future that honesty is the best policy."

The boy now found out who it was that helped him to drive the cow; and the duke was so pleased with the manliness and honesty of the boy, that he sent him to school and provided for him at his own expense.—Early Days.

TRUE LOVE OUT OF FASHION.—The country never possessed so many beautiful marriageable young women as it does at the present time. And why do we not have more marriages? We answer, because marriage for love is the exception and not the rule. The young people of this age have gone fashion and money mad. If the dandy bank clerk who pays one-half of his income for board and the other half for clothes cannot improve his condition he will not marry. The shop girl who earns good wages and cannot be distinguished by her dress from the banker's daughter certainly will not plunge into matrimony unless she can better her condition in life. If a man is fortunate enough to possess money, it matters not how old or ugly he may be, hundreds of intelligent, handsome young women can be found only too willing to become his wife. Love is an after-consideration. They marry to be supported and dressed extravagantly. How often do we hear the remark, "Better to be an old man's darling than a poor man's slave." Alas! too many of them are not satisfied to be darlings. They will persist in loving other men after they are married.

It cannot be denied that a great number of the unmarried men are adventures looking for wives who can keep them without working for a living. The peace and contentment of a happy home is not taken into consideration. They are willing to suffer a hell upon earth if they can be kept in idleness. If our young people do not abandon this extravagance of dress and greed for money our country will be filled with old bachelors and old maids. We must have more genuine courtships and marriages to have prosperity and happiness in this world. Too many marry for money only to be disappointed and unhappy the rest of their lives.—Albany Argus.

A CEORGIA editor speaks of "the shirt of Nestor, if his memory serves him right," on which the Boston Post remarks: "His memory does serve him right; and he might have added that Adam killed Nestor with a rolling-pin for asserting that Venus had a wart under her left arm."

"BE social with your cattle," says the American Agriculturist. That's so, there's nothing like dropping in, now and then, for a ten minutes' chat with the cows, or having the pigs to lunch occasionally.

THE CAMBRIA FREEMAN.

EBENSBURG, PA.,
Friday Morning, - - April 7, 1876.

THE boom bill, which passed the Senate some time ago, was equally successful in the House on Tuesday last, the vote thereon being 103 yeas to 45 nays. In the same body, on the following day, the act relating to judgments and stay of execution was defeated by five of a majority, the vote standing 77 in favor to 82 against the proposed law. Corruption on the boom bill is hinted at and an investigation committee appointed.

THE House of Representatives at Washington has selected seven of its members to conduct the impeachment trial before the Senate of General Belknap, late Secretary of War.—Their names are: Lord, of New York; Knott, of Kentucky; M'Mahon, of Ohio; Lynde, of Wisconsin; Jenks, of Pennsylvania; Lapham, of New York, and Hoar, of Massachusetts—the last two being Republicans. The trial before the Senate will not likely be commenced before the first week in May. Ex-Senator Carpenter, of Wisconsin, and Montgomery Blair, of Washington, will appear as counsel for Belknap, and possibly Judge Black, of this State.

IN reading the clap-trap resolutions of the late Republican State convention at Harrisburg, one looks in vain for the mention of the name of President Grant. The platform abounds with false and exploded charges against the Democratic party and its purposes, but does not contain a single word complimentary to the chief executive. This oblivion of the "Second Washington" is as strange as it is unprecedented in the Republican annals of this State. But yesterday Grant, in Republican estimation, could have stood against the world, and to day a Pennsylvania State convention of his own party refuses to do him reverence. Oh! what a fall was there, my countrymen.

A TUB was thrown to the negro whale by the Republican State convention in the appointment of William D. Forten as one of the alternate delegates at large from this State to the Cincinnati convention. Mr. Forten is a colored gentleman of respectability, and resides, we believe, in Philadelphia. The only contingency upon the happening of which he would be required to go to Cincinnati would be the refusal of the four regular delegates to attend—an event not likely to happen. Of course the convention would not accredit Forten as one of the regular delegates, for the plain reason that he might possibly be there. It is therefore a barren honor and purely ornamental. It will, however, satisfy the negro voters of the State, and they will continue to vote the radical ticket in a solid column. If it were a substantial and paying office that a radical State convention was about to confer, then no "man and brother" would need to apply.

THE election in Connecticut on Monday last resulted in a brilliant Democratic victory. The candidates elected were a Governor, State officers, Legislature, and one Congressman to fill a vacancy caused by the death of Ferry, Republican, during the present session. There were four candidates in the field for Governor—Ingersoll, Democrat, the present incumbent; Robinson, Republican; Atwater, Greenback, and Smythe, Temperance. The majority for Ingersoll over Robinson is more than 7,000, and his majority over all the candidates is about 3,800. Atwater, the Greenback candidate, received 2,000 votes, most of which were polled in New Haven, and at least two-thirds of which were cast by Democrats. Both branches of the Legislature are largely Democratic, the majority in the House being about 40. Waite, Republican, was elected to Congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Ferry, Republican. This election settles the vote of Connecticut on the Presidential issue.

ADELBERT AMES, the carpet-bag Governor of Mississippi, although an officer in the late war, has shown the "white feather" very effectually. He was impeached by the Legislature for high crimes and misdemeanors in office, and if he was a brave man and conscious of his innocence, as he protested he was, it was his duty to face the music, while, on the other hand, if the Legislature believed him to be guilty, it ought to have convicted and punished him. It was not a case to be compromised, but such has been the result. Ames, feeling that his hour had come, notified the impeachment committee last week that if the Legislature would abandon all proceedings against him he would resign his office and leave the State, and the Legislature, having assented to this proposition, Ames sent in his resignation, stepped down and out, and started for Massachusetts. That Ames, from his lawless career as Governor, richly deserved to be impeached and to suffer the consequences of a conviction, does not admit of much doubt, and the sudden termination of his trial in the way we have stated does not reflect any credit either upon him or the Legislature. The people of Mississippi, however, both white and black, will congratulate themselves that at last they are rid of a demagogue of the very first water, and may now look forward to the inauguration of peace and quiet within her borders. The President of the Senate, a conservative and a man of high character, has been sworn in as Ames' successor.

ANOTHER dark page has been turned over in the history of the connection of General Babcock with the St. Louis whisky ring. If there has heretofore existed a doubt about his complicity with the operations of that combination to defraud the government and promote his own personal gain, it would seem now to be effectually removed. A man named C. S. Bell, of Jackson, Miss., was examined last Friday as a witness before Mr. Clymer's committee. Said Bell seems to have been a scout during the war, and to have acted under General Grant at one time in the southwest. Last December Bell was appointed as a detective in the Pension office by the Secretary of the Interior, Chandler, at the instance of no less a personage than the President himself. He was then requested by Grant to go to St. Louis and ascertain the nature of the evidence against Babcock in his trial then soon to take place before the United States Court in that city, the President expressing an anxiety to ascertain in that most singular way whether Babcock was really guilty or innocent. Bell went to St. Louis, where he had conversations with Mr. Dyer, the District Attorney, in his office, saw a number of telegraphic dispatches and other documents relating to the case, and succeeded in getting a pretty fair insight into the nature of the evidence against Babcock. While he was in St. Louis, the President's Private secretary, Luckey, and A. C. Bradley, of Washington, one of Babcock's lawyers, both came to that city and employed him (Bell) to steal the evidence against Babcock out of the District Attorney's office and deliver it to them, in order that they might destroy it. Luckey immediately thereafter left for Washington and Bell started for the same place a few days subsequently. In Washington Babcock, Luckey and Bell had frequent interviews on the subject, in which Babcock repeatedly told him if he made the effort to get the papers he (Bell) must get all of them, and that only a portion of them would be worse than none. Bell, having from these interviews become satisfied of Babcock's guilt, took occasion to inform the President of his convictions, and three days afterwards Chandler revoked the appointment he had given him. This testimony of Bell has produced a very decided sensation at Washington, and although Babcock and Luckey denounce it as utterly false, it is believed to be substantially true, having already been in its leading features confirmed by Mr. Dyer, the District Attorney, who was examined before the committee on the following day. Bell asserts his ability to make his declaration good.

IT is made a matter of complaint by the friends of the present corrupt national administration, that the expenses incident to the numerous investigations into radical misrule now going on at Washington are not compensated by the results thus far arrived at. All investigations by Congressional committees empowered to send for persons and papers must necessarily involve considerable outlay; but as the matters to be enquired into effect the highest interests of the people, they have a right to the information and will not seriously complain about the cost. Public attention cannot be diverted from an exposure of the corrupt practises of the administration by the parrot cry of expense. It did not cost a very large sum to produce Caleb P. Marsh before Mr. Clymer's committee and get from him the brief story of Belknap's Shame; nor did it cause a heavy outlay to compel Orvil Grant to tell how he and his brother (the President) monopolized several very profitable post traderships. These investigations, as far as they have gone, disclose a state of corruption and debauchery in almost every branch of the Government service, unequalled in the history of any former administration. What makes them conspicuously offensive is the connection with them of the Dents and the Grants, the near relatives of the President. Men within the very shadows of the White House have been implicated in the most questionable transactions, and the evidence of fraudulent conduct has been traced to the most intimate personal friends of its occupant. It is not a pleasant task to refer to or discuss these unseemly developments, but the Democratic party owes it to itself and its repeated pledges to the people to expose and hold up to the public execration the men who for years have been plundering them and prostituting their positions for the promotion of their own personal interests. A Democratic House has commenced these investigations and it will not abandon them until the work is thoroughly accomplished, regardless of any crocodile tears shed by the Republican press over the expense attending them.

THE colored brethern are not happy under the recent rebuff at the Republican State convention, which gave substantial positions to the Pilgrim, Irish and German element, but turned their royal backs upon a class, as voters, now very important to the radical party. The Phila. Times puts it thus:

> The colored man and brother fared rather indifferently at Harrisburg. Notwithstanding he furnishes more votes to the party than the majority given to Hartranft last fall, he is crowded to the tail end of the alternates-at-large in the person of Mr. William D. Forten, and will have a chance to get on the floor of the Cincinnati Convention in case of several funerals in the regular delegation. The whole list of alternates is a fraud, for it has been the standing rule of national conventions not even to recognize such tomfoolery by giving the surplus fellows a place in the convention. No State elects them but Pennsylvania, and it is done here simply to catch gudgeons by flinging little tubs to them in the shape of the emptiest sort of honors. It was all that could be found about the Cameron-Pilgrim cupboard for a black man, and it was tossed to him as an afterthought. But if he doesn't complain who should complain?

A Long Search for a Wife.

A MAN WHO CROSSED THE OCEAN THREE TIMES TO FIND HIS FAITHLESS SPOUSE.

In July, 1874, John Pearson, a miner at Manor Station, Pennsylvania, sailed for England, his native country, taking with him a daughter seven years old, and intending after arranging his business in England to send for his wife Martha, and another little daughter who remained with her mother in Pennsylvania, to meet him there. When Mr. Pearson arrived in England he twice wrote for his wife to meet him there, but he received no reply, and she did not come. Alarmed, he then returned to this country, but found his house deserted. His former neighbors at Manor Station told him his wife went away about a month after he sailed, saying that she was going to meet her husband.

Pearson could find no traces of her in this country, and he returned to England and traveled through England, Scotland, and Wales in search of his lost wife and child. Unsuccessful, he sailed again for this country and searched more carefully in the towns of Pennsylvania. At Harrisburg he ascertained that William Kehoe, who had boarded with him at Manor Station before he went to England, had met Mrs. Pearson at Jack's hotel in August, 1874, and gone away with her. Before making this discovery Pearson had entertained no suspicion that his wife had eloped, because she had always lived happily with him. Determined to find his faithless wife and her lover, he then put the case in the hands of Chief of Police Hoopes of Harrisburg. It was discovered by the detectives that Kehoe had an aunt living in Hudson, and last December Chief of Police Snyder of this city was furnished with photographs of Kehoe and Mrs. Pearson, and requested to search for them. He soon got on the track of the guilty couple, and found that they had been living in and near Hudson as husband and wife. Kehoe had been employed as a quarryman, and while living in the suburbs last November Mrs. Pearson's daughter, four years old, was accidentally burned to death. The had afterward come to this city, and resided in Strawberry alley.

Last Saturday Mr. Pearson arrived here, and with the officers he went to meet his wife, who was found washing at the Waldron House. She was brought unsuspecting into the hotel parlor and confronted with her husband. The wife sank upon her knees and with upraised hands and lips white as snow fervently begged forgiveness. Their trifling difficulties were talked over, a proper understanding was had, and it was there agreed the past should never be reviewed. Mrs. Pearson promised to be a faithful wife and agreed to return to her former home. She rolled down her sleeves, repaired to her late place of abode, donned her silk dress, left Kehoe to attend to the chores, and departed with her child and husband by the 11:10 train Saturday evening for Harrisburg, by way of New York, a happier woman than she has been for two years past.—N. Y. Sun.

BURSTING OF A DAM.—At 8 o'clock on Wednesday evening of last week it was reported that the Lynde Brook reservoir, near Worcester, Mass., which covers 140 acres and contains 670,000,000 gallons of water was on the point of giving way. At 2:30 a. m. the gap was twenty feet wide, and was rapidly increasing, and large tree trunks, bales of hay, and loads of dirt were thrown into the gap, and the rush of water somewhat lessened. At 5:30 Thursday afternoon the water was seen bubbling through the earth of the dam. The stream when first noticed was not larger than a man's finger; in less than half a minute it was as large as a man's leg; gradually its size increased until, with one grand crash, the whole volume was let off. Down through a narrow ravine 100 feet wide and one mile long the flood swept on. The largest trees were twisted around like straws, pulled up by the roots, and carried onward down the decline. The flood tore out everything in the ravine and rushed onward toward the highway. A large barn was taken up bodily and carried about fifty feet, when it struck a tree and was broken into pieces. The waters reached Kettlebrook, and the vast amount swept across a pond, at the head of which stood Smith & Co.'s woolen mill. In front of it was a dam, which had withstood many a severe test, but it crumbled under the immense pressure brought upon it, and gave way, and the waters of the pond were added to the already uncontrollable mass. There was great destruction of valuable mill and other property, valued in all at about $200,000.

IMPORTANT DISCLOSURES.—Some important disclosures were made on Friday before Clymer's committee in regard to General Babcock.

A certain C. S. Bell, of Jackson Miss., who had formerly been a detective, was appointed special agent in the pension bureau at the request of the President, who wanted him to go west and examine secretly into Babcock's alleged connection with the whisky ring, and to inform him as to the facts. General Babcock and Luckey got hold of the witness and induced him, by the promise of a large appointment, to go to St. Louis to steal from the district attorney's office any evidences against Gen. Babcock, which he was to hand over to Babcock, himself. He went west and abstracted from District Attorney Dyer's office the papers against Babcock, which he took to the Lindell hotel, where Babcock and, his counsel examined them. The papers were not destroyed, however, but returned.

Witness got disgusted with the whole thing, and returning to Washington, told the President that Babcock was guilty, whereupon he was dismissed from the service without any intimation whatever as to the cause of his removal.

SCOUNDRELS AT THE CENTENNIAL.—The Philadelphia Times is authority for the statement that thieves, sharpers and human vultures of every kind and degree are thronging there in advance of the visitors and laying their plans of operation for the Centennial. One of the most infamous enterprises brought to light is an agency for enticing respectable young ladies from the country to dens of iniquity in that city. Circulars are being scattered through neighboring towns and cities, addressed to girls whose names have been somehow obtained, promising them pleasant situations about the exhibition buildings at large pay, and advising them to leave their homes secretly, lest their parents should object. The originators of this scheme sign themselves Hayes, Arlington & Brother, and have been using the postoffice in furtherance of their wicked designs. Another kindred enterprise is the opening of bogus employment agencies in certain parts of the city to entrap respectable women into the clutches of harpies. The municipal authorities should use every exertion to bring the authors of these and similar enterprises to speedy punishment.

—A terrible accident occurred near Sugar Lake, Crawford county, on Thursday forenoon. A man named H. Ferry had a double-barreled shot-gun, loaded with buckshot, which, while he was getting off his horse, was in some way discharged, the effects killing instantly Miss Wentworth, aged 23, and her cousin, a little boy about 8 years of age, who were looking out of the window of their house. The charges took effect in the boy's head and in the heart of the lady.

A Ghastly Mystery.

The people of Stuyvesant Landing, N. Y., were greatly excited on Monday last by the announcement that a wooden box, containing human remains, had been discovered on the bank of the Hudson river. The body had been cut into small pieces, but the remains were evidently those of a person recently murdered. The box was about five feet long and two feet wide, and was made of rough boards, fastened together with large nails. On one side were the words "College Place," painted with a marking brush and black ink. A name had been painted above the words "College Place," but it had been so badly obliterated that it could not be deciphered. David M'Allister, who found the box, is a mere lad. He is the son of the keeper of the little light-house placed on the banks of the Hudson to guide the river craft on dark and foggy nights. As soon as he discovered the ghastly nature of the contents of the box he called his father, and the two carried it up the bank and placed it out of the reach of the water. The cover was loose when the boy found the box, and was partly open, so that he could ascertain by a glance what was inside. The news of the horrible discovery spread like wild fire among the villagers and farmers in the neighborhood. Coroners Holsappel and Ball were immediately notified, and one of the village physicians was allowed by Coroner Holsappel, who first arrived at the scene, to take the remains into a building near the river and examine them. The physician said that the remains were probably those of a young girl. The body had, however, been cut up so much, and portions being missing, he could not definitely tell whether the remains were those of a girl or a boy of perhaps fifteen years of age. A detective belonging to the police force of Hudson City is doing all in his power to solve the mystery, but thus far nothing has been learned indicating who the murdered person was or from whence the box came. It is conjectured the words "College Place" on the box had nothing to do with the remains of the body, as the box was similar to those used by manufacturers of lead water traps in which to pack the traps for shipment. To all appearances it had been used before. So far as is known no person is missing from any family in the vicinity.

A $200,000 HOTEL.—What Dr. Pierce is Doing—An Important Enterprise.—We learn that Dr. R. V. Pierce, proprietor of the "World's Dispensary," in this city, has perfected the purchase of a large lot of land on which he proposes to erect a large hotel for the accommodation of his numerous patients, coming hither from all points of the compass. The land purchased by the enterprising Doctor is 234 feet front on Prospect avenue, running through to Fargo avenue, 332 feet; also an adjoining lot extending from the above to Connecticut street. It is in the midst of our extensive system of public parks, fronts the old and beautiful Prospect Park, is but a short distance from the "Circle" in one direction, and the "Lake Front" in the other. The site selected is a fine one, being both beautiful and healthful; is one of the highest portions of our city, easily accessible, yet sufficiently retired to secure quiet, and commands a pleasant view of the lake and river, as well as of the surrounding city and country. We understand that it is the intention of Dr. Pierce to erect a hotel at the cost of at least two hundred thousand dollars, where those who come to enjoy the benefit of his treatment may find all desired accommodations under one roof, instead of being scattered over the city, as at present. We are further given to understand that our architects will be invited to submit plans for the proposed structure without delay.—Buffalo Express.

BETTER THAN GOLD MINES.—A determined effort is made to have the President remove Thomas B. Searight, of Pennsylvania, Surveyor General of Colorado Territory, and appoint in his place H. L. Thayer, of Denver. Searight is a protege of Senator Cameron, who declares that if the Divine Being wanted the appointment of Surveyor General in Searight's place he could not obtain it. Searight went to Colorado three or four years ago a poor man and is now rich. He is charged with having sold contracts for surveying to his deputies for one-third and one-fourth of the contract price allowed by the Government, and then his inferiors have made a good thing out of it. In one case Searight awarded a contract for surveying to a man named John Lessing for between $10,000 and $12,000. The work could have been well performed in six weeks, but as Lessing announced its completion in six days' time an investigation was determined upon by some outside parties. They learned that he had not performed one iota of the work he had contracted to do, and Searight allowed his claim and paid the money solely on Lessing's representations and in the face of the fact that he had not made the slightest attempt to do the work for which he was paid.—Washington Special to the N. Y. World.

—Carlisle is infested with a gang of villains who, when caught, should have the penalty of the law meted out to them promptly and in no stinted measure. But a few weeks ago the town was startled by an explosion, originated by some malicious scoundrels, threatening terrible destruction to life and property, and on Wednesday evening a similar outrage was perpetrated, the explosion taking place at the residence of ex-Sheriff McCartney. An examination of the premises revealed the fact that explosive material had been placed inside the vestibule, and the explosion knocked out a portion of the wall, shattered the first and second floors, broke all the windows and destroyed a large quantity of furniture. Fragments of glass, etc., were carried a distance of more than a hundred yards. A gentleman who was in a dwelling two squares distant states that the building was shaken considerably, as well as all others between the two points and in other directions. Fortunately no persons were injured. The inmates of Mr. McCartney's dwelling were in an upper story, and escaped the death which would certainly have overtaken them if they had been below.

A MATTER OF POPULAR INTEREST

We condense from the Lehigh Register the substance of a conversation about Oak Hall, in Philadelphia, Wanamaker & Brown's "Largest Clothing House in America." A visitor and attendant are the speakers:

Visitor. "What corner is the Building on?"

Attendant. "South-East corner of Sixth and Market. Please note the SIXTH, for some strangers seeking Oak Hall, have been misled by designing persons."

V. "It is perfectly colossal! Do you know its dimensions?"

A. "12,000 square feet—66 on Market, and 180 odd on Sixth, six stories high, has over three acres of flooring, and covers space once occupied by more than twenty different business places."

V. "Do you use steam-power?"

A. "A giant young engine furnishes power for the freight and passenger elevators, and the boilers steam for heating, and the other operations of the house."

V. "What order do you take with goods?"

A. "They are first opened and arranged in the basement, on long low counters, and taken thence on the freight elevator to the inspector's room on the sixth floor."

V. "Is inspecting the next operation?"

A. "No, sir, measuring. The goods are first measured in the piece, then inspected. The cloth passes over rollers in the face of a strong light, and two men sit, one before and one behind the goods, watching with the eye of a hawk for the least pin-hole imperfection, and marking every flaw, so that the cutter may see and avoid it when he comes to cut the garments."

V. "You must employ an army of cutters?"

A. "Come to our fifth floor and see! We keep 70 hands all the time cutting up the cloth into garments.—Besides the machines that do a dozen men's work each at a stroke."

V. "Do you manufacture all your own goods?"

A. "We do, and most carefully. Our examiners inspect every stitch and seam, and certify to every garment as extra-well made before we put our ticket on it, and become responsible for it."

V. "Your system must save you a great deal?"

A. "In every direction, sir. It is the system and economy we practice all the way through, that enables us to put our prices down to the people as we do."

V. "After inspecting the work, what becomes of it?"

A. "Before it goes into Stock it is ticketed. Every single garment has its number and other points noted on it, so that its entire history can be traced without fail, upon our books."

V. "You must have 30 or 40 salesmen?"

A. "Why sir, on busy days you may see 100 in the various rooms and suites of rooms, selling to the throngs of customers."

V. "Do you do an order business, by mail and express?"

A. "Very great. All over the country. Our perfect system and rules of self-measure make it possible to please people far away [illegible] perfectly as if they [illegible] person."

—Mr. Bell was paid $2,195 a year as government detective; Mr. Bell was sent to St. Louis to rob District Attorney Dyer of certain important documentary evidence against Babcock; Mr. Bell failed to do it; Mr. Bell was dismissed from his office. Further comments would seem to be unnecessary.

—A cat belonging to Nathan Wilson of Langdon recently got upon his bed and waked him by scratching. Thrown off, it immediately returned and renewed its demonstrations, until Mr. Wilson got up and found the house on fire about the fireplace, just in time to save the house and the family.

—John E. Shawhan, a San Francisco stock speculator, has built a stable at a cost of about $100,000, chiefly to gratify his wife, who is fond of horses. It contains a parlor handsomely furnished for her use; and the carriage and harness rooms, stalls, and other apartments are finished in fine woods.

—Subscriptions are being made in France to send workmen to this country to inspect the Centennial Exposition. Apropos of this, the French Government has determined to have a universal exposition in Paris in 1878. It is intended to make it the grandest and most comprehensive affair of the kind ever held.

—C. S. Bell, the detective, who gave such damaging testimony regarding the St. Louis whisky trials before the committee on war expenditures on Friday, was attacked in a brutal manner on Saturday evening with a club by a man named Mollair, formerly of New Orleans, and at one time a doorkeeper in the Senate.

—The Phila. Times says there is reason to be hopeful of the President's recovery. The dispatches say that he is able to enjoy his cigar again; that Rev. Dr. Newman is praying for him, and that Mrs. Grant keeps one of the other sort of doctors in attendance night and day to guard against a sudden relapse. Ferry stands no show yet.

—Bridget O'Donnell was found dead on Sunday morning last in a field on the northern outskirts of Wilkesbarre. A post mortem examination was held and it was shown that her person had been violated and then she had been choked to death. There was no clue to the murderer, but the police were in pursuit of a tramp who was seen in that neighborhood on Saturday evening.

—John Quiggle, of Pine station, Pa., has the oldest shoemaker's lasts in this state, bearing date 1644. They are of stone. He has also in his possession a pipe found in 1855, at Grove's run, on the Sinnemahoning, eight miles above the mouth, which is supposed to be the one Swampoo, an Indian, lost when Grove captured the Indians at the above place.

—The noblest, "last words" that have recently been uttered, were those of Superintendent Flint, of the Midland Railroad, who, held fast amid the ruins of the train that fell through the trestle work at Willowemoc, called out to those who were trying to rescue him, "Stop that mail train!" and then died. The mail train and its passengers that were rushing to almost certain destruction were saved.

—Mr. Hezekiah Ervin, near Schollsville, in this county, received last week from John Goodrich of Kenton county a bear of a strange breed. He is perfectly black all over, is about six months old, and weighs 200 pounds. The singular part is that his hoofs are all solid like those of a mule or horse. He belongs to a breed that came from Africa, and all have feet of this kind.—Clark County (Ky.) Democrat.

—The bill to reduce the boomage on lumber to one dollar per thousand feet in the boom at Williamsport passed the house finally on Tuesday afternoon by a vote of 103 to 45. This question, which has occupied the time and attention of the Legislature for so many years, is at last disposed of, and the Patriot thinks the Legislature can now proceed to the completion of the remaining business of the session, and with the disposition of this bill will probably be prepared for adjournment at or near the end of the hundred days.

—The Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Companies are co-operating in reducing the fare to Philadelphia during the Centennial. It is said that the round trip from Pittsburgh will be fourteen dollars, which is a reduction of thirty per cent. from the present rates of fare. West of Pittsburgh the reduction will be 25 per cent. The tickets at the reduced rates will be sold during the months of May, June, July, August, September and October, and they will be good for a return trip at any time during thirty days.

—The N. Y. Sun says that seven thousand dollars' worth or silks were saved by a little terrier dog, in a store on Eighth avenue, in that city, a few nights since. Some burglars had cut a hole through the rear wall and entered the store, when the faithful little sentinel, who had been chained to a stool outside the counter near the silks, gave a loud bark. This woke a clerk who was sleeping on the floor above, and, coming down, he discovered what was going on, and gave the alarm. A carriage was found in the street near by containing a kit of burglar's tools. Fortunately the depravity of the times has not extended to watch dogs, and they still remain faithful.

—Mr. John Coulter, of Bolivar, West-eland county, was drowned on Sunday while attempting to cross the river at place on horseback. The animal he riding either scared or stumbled and owing him off, one of his feet caught in stirrup and he was dragged a consider-distance. He leaves a wife and sever-hildren. Mr. Coulter's father met with fate some years ago.
A half-witted inmate of the Blair county house, John Dodson by name, laid self to rest on one of the C. I. Co.'s coke ns at Hollidaysburg, on Wednesday of last week, and like many another less sleeper, he during his slumbers ed the cover off. This time, however,

Mr. Joseph Gutwalt, ye butcher man caters so well and so successfully to the mal wants of a host of customers, and is always on the look-out for the best cattle, etc., the country affords, recent-purchased three mammoth steers in Indi-county whose aggregate weight reached r 3,500 pounds. It is needless to say that such stock cometh the most tender and ious roasts, steaks, etc., and no man in business takes more pride in dispensing luxuries on Monday and Friday even-of each week than does Mr. Gotwald.

—We had the pleasure last week of forming the acquaintance of Mr. Jas. J. Thomas, of Carroll township, one of the aspirants for legislature honors under Democratic auspices, and we must say that we were very favorably impressed with his appearance and bearing. He is an intelligent, live man, and very popular wherever known, and if nominated he will no doubt be found worthy of the victory gained over his two prominent and able competitors in this end of the county, Messrs. Fenlon and Rhey.

—Mr. D. W. Harshberger, of Johnstown, woke up on Monday morning last and found his wife dead by his side. She had been in ill health for some time and was supposed to be troubled with heart disease, which no doubt terminated her existence. Her age was about 38 years and she leaves one child, a daughter well grown. On the same morning, near East Conemaugh, a young child of Jacob and Margaret Ream was found dead in bed, and as it was in its usual robust health the night previous, the cause of its death seems to be unaccountable.

—Mrs. Margaret Farrell, mother-in-law of our valued friend, James W. Condon, Esq., of Summitville, died March 6th, 1876, at the residence of that gentleman, after having attained the remarkable age of 97 years, or thereabouts. The deceased came from Maryland with her parents when a mere child, and consequently was among the earliest settlers in Northern Cambria, many years of her life having been passed at what is known as "Hart's Sleeping Place." She lived and died an exemplary Catholic, and received in her last moments all the consolations of that faith.

—Although it is no doubt a well known fact in the north-eastern part of this county that Messrs. Cooper & Mellon, of Chest Springs, are liberal and enterprising merchants, it may not be amiss to say that just now they are disposed to do better than ever for their customers, inasmuch as they are desirous of making room for their Spring stock and won't hesitate to take first cost for nearly every article on their shelves. Their only terms, however, are cash or its equivalent, and buyers who have the money to invest cannot do better anywhere than with this really deserving firm. Try them.

—A man named Joseph Storm, a resident of Chest Springs, was arrested on Saturday last for attempting to outrage the person of a married lady residing in the East Ward of this borough, but while being brought to jail the accused managed to elude the officer by jumping from the sleigh and taking to the woods, since when no tidings of his whereabouts have been received. The outrage complained of occurred on Tuesday of last week, and although the lecherous scoundrel failed in his beastly purpose, he succeeded in tearing nearly all the clothing from his intended victim and otherwise abused her very shamefully.

—Dr. M. J. Buck, eldest son of Hon. John Buck, of Carrolltown, has recently received a diploma from the Philadelphia Homeopathic College, which he attended during the past winter, and having graduated from the Jefferson Medical College, in the same city, some four years previous, he is now eminently qualified to combat all the ills human flesh is heir to in accordance with either the allopathic or homeopathic systems. Jas. P. Buck, another of the family, is now attending lectures at the first named institution, and we hope that he may, like his worthy brother, graduate with honor to himself and to the profession he has adopted.

—Now comes the gentle spring time, with a flavor of buds and blossoms in the air and little bits of faint green grass coyly peeping from under the warm sides of old trees, and men going down on all fours, with a table knife, digging heads off of obstinate carpet tacks, and like as not ripping their pants and otherwise demoralizing their clothing in such a way as to necessitate an early visit to the long established, amply stocked, and always popular cheap clothing bazaar of Godfrey Wolff, next door to the post-office, Altoona, where a large and elegant stock of Spring clothing has just been received and opened for the inspection of all the world and the rest of mankind.

—We see it stated that when General Stark heard of the battle of Lexington he was at work in his saw-mill, and getting stark mad about the news, he left a log half sawed, and never returned to finish it.—That identical log, we are told, is to be on exhibition at the centennial, but we would rather spend fifty dollars, if we had that amount, in the purchase of a new suit of clothes at Star Clothing Hall, 169 Clinton street, Johnstown, where the best and most seasonable wearing apparel can always be had at the very lowest prices, than wager five cents that the log to be exhibited is not some other log than the log which General Stark left half sawed when he went to fight for his country.

—Mr. John Bloch, a well known citizen of Johnstown, who for two successive terms, the last of which ended in December, 1875, filled the position of Poor House Director for this county, died rather suddenly and unexpectedly, about 4 o'clock on Thursday evening last, in the forty-first year of his age. The deceased was a cabinet-maker by trade and having done a very successful business, accumulated considerable property real and personal. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his sudden death. His funeral on Sunday afternoon last was one of the largest ever witnessed in Johnstown, several secret societies, of which he was a member, and the citizens generally turning out in full force. Interment at Sandy Vale cemetery.

—We are pleased to record the fact that our young friend Curt. G. Campbell, son of Gen. Jacob M. Campbell, of Johnstown, has become associated with Mr. John T. Kinney, of that place, in the drug business. We learned to esteem Curt. while he was seeking to acquire a knowledge of the "art preservative" in the Johnstown Tribune office, and now that he has fully prepared himself for the position he has just assumed by a three years' course in theoretical chemistry at the State College, and by two years' experience in compounding prescriptions, etc., under his present partner, we feel sure that his appearance as one of the firm is the precursor of a successful future in the business world for the extensive drug house of Kinney & Campbell, 264 Main st., Johnstown.

—Mr. Joseph Freidhoff, one of the oldest and most esteemed citizens of Munster township, died very suddenly about 2 o'clock on Sunday afternoon last from hemorrhage of the lungs, or more properly speaking, perhaps, from suffocation produced by hemorrhage of the lungs. The deceased had partaken of a very hearty dinner, and was getting ready to go to the Summit to consult a physician in regard to some other ailment which afflicted him, and was up stairs putting on additional raiment when the dread summons came. Mr. Freidhoff was an uncle of County Treasurer Freidhoff and was aged about 68 years. He was a married man, but we believe had no family, and made his home with one of his nephews, at whose house he died. Interment in the Catholic cemetery, Loretto, on Tuesday. May he rest in peace.

—Our readers will probably remember that we gave publicity several months ago to the alleged fact that wood ashes sprinkled on the vines would destroy the potato bugs, and requested any one who saw fit to try the experiment to let us know the result. In compliance with this request, Mr. Conrad Yeager, of Chest township, assured us a few days ago that he sprinkled his vines with the ashes of oak wood and that it accomplished the purpose fully and satisfactorily. He was somewhat late in applying the ashes, but has no doubt that if the matter is attended to promptly and at the proper time the ashes will "put a head" on the potato bugs and save every vine from their depredations. As these terrible pests will no doubt pass through Cambria county in great numbers on their way to the centennial, it will be well enough for our farmer friends and others interested to try the virtue of wood ashes.

—Whatever may be said about the planks in the Republican platform constructed at Harrisburg last week, it must be admitted that the Plank put into the Republican State Central Committee cannot be successfully assailed. We refer of course to Dr. E. H. Plank, of this place, who is the member of said committee from this county.

—The roof and second story of Vowinkle's soap factory, in Hollidaysburg, were destroyed by fire on Monday evening last, the rest of the building being saved through the exertions of the fire department. Loss, $700; cause, defective flue.

Our Puzzle Department.

MUNSTER TWP., April 1, 1876.

DEAR FREEMAN—Having been paying some attention to your "Puzzle Department" without contributing anything thereto, and seeing that your correspondents not unfrequently differed in their solutions to many of the problems, among them the cubical box to be made from a plank of certain dimensions, I thought, without intending offence to any of them, that I would give my opinion on that particular problem—thus: If a box can be made from the plank without any waste of material, then E. F. M.'s solution was correct, or so very near it that the error would be too small to talk about. But "Loretto" seems to think that the plank could not be cut without some waste of material, and hence the sides of the greatest cubical box that could be made from such a plank would be 48 15-16 inches, allowing one-sixteenth of an inch for the saw cut. And I am obliged to concur with him, as the proposition was to make a box from that plank. The size of cubical box made from the given plank, according to the rule advanced by A. D. H., would be 49.8257 inches. Well, a cubical box that size made from a plank 4 inches thick would have more material in it than the plank contained by about 227 cubic inches. Proof: 49.8257x49.8257x4x2=19956, contents of two sides; 49.8257x41.8257x4x2=16671, contents of part of two sides; 41.8257x41.8257x4x2=13995, balance of other two sides—making total in box 50627 cubic inches; and as the plank contained 50400 cubic inches, there must of necessity have been 227 inches more in the box than in the plank. If this can be clearly contradicted I hope some of your correspondents will be kind enough to point out the error.

Answer to Problem No. 1 of F. J. O'C. of Whiskey Springs—Let him cut the board 42.17664 inches from the wide end.

No. 2.—Part of ditch dug by one at 75 cts. per rod was 56,155648 rods; part of ditch dug by the other at $1.25 was 43.844452 rods. This is allowing price at 75 cts. to increase arithmetical ratio from the first rod, and price at $1.25 to decrease arithmetical ratio from the first rod. But if the prices were 75 cts. and $1.25 for each rod of their respective parts, then I pronounce the problem absurd. And if not absurd, let some of your correspondents prove that fact.

Answer to A. D. H.'s liquor cask—The one cask having contained 84 gallons, the other cask will contain 60 gallons; so when contents of both casks are mixed, the mixture will contain equal portions of water and liquor. Yours, &c., C. B. D.

CHEST SPRINGS, April 3, 1876.

DEAR FREEMAN—Some of the contributors having retired from the "Puzzle Department," I presume the "tug of war" impends between Chest Springs, the representative of pure cold water, and "Whiskey Springs" which, I opine, stands in the breach for "Old King Alcohol."

The two latest problems sent in from the fire-water region have already been discussed in the "Puzzle Department." However, we will "make daylight shine through them" once more. Euclid says that "similar triangles are to one another in the duplicate ratio of their homologous sides," and as the board problem is only bisecting a triangle by a line drawn parallel to its base, I find that the said line must be drawn 8 feet and 6 inches from the point.

In the second problem the length of the ditch is not given; but to exhaust the $50 one man would have to dig 40 rods and the other 66⅔ rods.

I think "Loretto" might have overlooked a little joke, as I meant no offence. I like "Rob Roy," because he wouldn't get angry if you tied a tin boiler to a canine's caudal extremity. However, I most humbly apologize for my misdemeanor, and I hope to see the work of "Loretto's" genial pen once more in the "Puzzle Department."

We used to tell a boy who slammed the door of the school room as he went out to come back and close it more gently. The application is obvious.

I admit an oversight in my answer to "Rob Roy's" fourth problem, and I beg pardon for pronouncing it a humbug. The answer is: B.'s money, 6412-17 dollars; A.'s money, 2912-17 dollars; C.'s money, 768-17 dollars. A. D. H.

P. S. "Hermanum est errare," you know.

CHEST SPRINGS, April 1, 1876.

DEAR FREEMAN—A. D. H. in referring to my rule for working his box problem says that assertion is no proof. I will agree with him, but when figures proved the assertion I did not think it necessary to offer further proof to an expert arithmetician. It would take up too much space to give him a full demonstration in print, but if he will call on me personally I will do so cheerfully.

A. D. H. states that he would be very much gratified by seeing some of my answers to "Rob Roy's" problems. I suppose he was gratified when he saw my solution to "R. R.'s" plowing problem, and I will gratify him effectually this time by sending him the answer to "R. R.'s" fourth problem, which he was trying to solve by all his rules and theorems for three weeks, and then had to give it up. In speaking of that fourth problem he says: It won't work somehow, and my private opinion of it would lead me to conclude that it is a humbug and can't be done. I have tried every ordinary method of solving simultaneous equations, and still I only get absurd answers. Hence the above conclusion." So much for his private opinion.

Here is the answer to this wonderful little problem: A.'s money, $29 7-17 B.'s, $64 12-17, C. s, $5 8-17; whole sum, 170 10-17.

Answer to A. D. H.'s wine and water problem—24 gallons wine and 36 gallons water. For want of time I will have to bid adieu to the "Puzzle Department" for a while.

Yours, &c., E. F. MCCONNELL.

COURT PROCEEDINGS.—From the close of our last report up to the time of going to press on Thursday afternoon, the following cases in Court were taken up and disposed of in the manner indicated:

Com'th vs. F. X. Haid—selling liquor on Sunday and keeping a tippling house; F. P. Bradley, prosecutor. Nolle prosequi entered, and license just granted to defendant revoked by the Court.

Com'th vs. Ambrose and Valentine Lantzey—larceny and receiving stolen goods. Defendants convicted in Indiana county and sentenced to the penitentiary for similar offences before a true bill was found against them by the Grand Jury of this county.

Com'th vs. Jacob Hocker—assault and battery; Charles Moore, prosecutor. Not guilty, but guilty enough to "go halvers" with the prosecutor in the payment of the costs.

J. M. Christy vs. Allegheny Mountain Coal Co. Jury called and sworn, when plaintiff proposed offering testimony which was excluded, and having no other evidence to present, a non-suit was ordered by the Court, with privilege to take off the same before the judges sitting in banc.

John Brotherline vs. Gates & Son et. al.—trespass involving title to land. Attachments for witnesses having been returned unexecuted, case ordered to the foot of the list at the expense of the plaintiff.

Daniel McDonald's Adm'rs vs. August Lambert, Verdict for plaintiffs for $25.

Magdalena Sharbaugh vs. Charles Johnston. Plaintiff takes non-suit.

Johnston & Scanlan vs. John Brotherline. Jury find for plaintiffs $35 82.

Edward Thomas vs. Richard J. Evans—ejectment. Jury find for defendant.

H. S. Myers & Co. vs. Anthony J. Conrad—replevin. Verdict for defendant.

Wm. H. Boyer & Co., for use of John C. Trout, vs. Joseph R. Hollen and Robert Hollen. Verdict for defendants.

John Beam vs. John Benton and Eben James. Jury find for plaintiff.

Cambria Borough School District vs. James Meeghan and Daniel McPeak. Verdict for plaintiff for $289.16.

John McCusker vs. Edward Quinn, Constable of Cambria Borough. Plaintiff awarded $135 by the jury.

J. C. Trout vs. P. M. Woleslagle & Son. On trial.

COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS.—Hon. John Reilly, member of Congress from this (17th) district, has furnished for publication the following card, which may be of interest to some of our young readers:

All candidates for appointment as cadets to the West Point Military Academy are notified that a competitive examination will be held at the Logan House, Altoona, on Wednesday, April 19, 1876. Candidates will be examined in reading, writing, orthography, arithmetic, English grammar, geography, (particularly of the United States) and history of the United States. The age for cadets is between seventeen and twenty-two years, at least five feet high and they must be free from any deformity, disease or infirmity which may render them unfit for military service. The successful candidate will be required to report at the Academy not later than April 25th.

JOHN REILLY,
M. C., XVII District.

HYMENEAL.

MATHEWS—JAMES.—Married, in this place, Nov. 25th, 1875, by Rev. D. Evans, Mr. EDWARD MATHEWS and Miss CHARLOTTE JAMES, all of Ebensburg.

ASSEMBLY.—I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Assembly, subject to the decision of the approaching Democratic county convention. JOHN S. RHEY.
Ebensburg, March 31, 1876.

TOUCH NOT!—Having bought at Sheriff's sale as the property of JOHN WEAKLAND, and left with him during my pleasure, 1 bay mare, 1 black horse, 1 two-horse sled, and 2 sets harness, I hereby warn all persons not to interfere or meddle in any way with said property. MRS. ANN ADAMS.
Clearfield Twp., April 7, 1876.-3t.

STRAY BULL.—Came into the enclosure of the subscriber, in White township, Cambria county, a black bull, with white belly, white star in the face, white spots on the legs, and the tail tipped with white; supposed to be two years old this spring. The owner is hereby notified to come forward, prove property, pay charges and take him away; failing in which he will be disposed of as the law directs.
J. C. MULHOLEM.
White Twp., March 27, 1876.-3t.*

The State House—1776—1876.

The erection of this edifice was begun in 1729 and completed in 1734. The two wings were added in 1739-'40, and it was then one of the largest and most costly edifices for civil purposes in America. Previous to its erection the sessions of the Legislature of Pennsylvania were held at private houses. The first purchase of grounds for the building included only about half the depth to Walnut street. In 1760 the other half square was purchased, and the whole space enclosed by a heavy brick wall. John Vaughan, who came from England to reside in Philadelphia, planted the grounds with elm trees and shrubbery in 1783.—Afterwards the brick wall was removed and the present neat iron-railing erected in its place. [This is the railing recently removed.] The cost of the main building of the State House and its steeple was about $28,000. The style of the architecture was directed by Dr. John Kearsly, Sr., the same amateur who gave architectural character to Christ Church. The glass and lead sashes cost $860. The glazing was done by Thomas Godfrey, afterwards celebrated as the inventor of the quadrant.

The interior decorations remain as originally designed, and, for the production of so early a time, are very fine; and those of the main hall, embracing a richly-pannelled ceiling and a heavy cornice supported by fluted columns, will strike the eye as exceedingly beautiful. The ornamentation of each door leading to the "Hall of Independence" on the west is florid, having a centre medallion from which the face of one of the Georges projects in bas-relief. The eastern chamber, which is a shrine to every American, was the theatre wherein was proposed, debated, adopted and signed the Declaration of Independence, which was finally promulgated on the 4th of July, 1776.

The Hall still presents, as far as has been possible to retain it, its appearance. The portraits of the signers embellish the walls, perpetuating not only the face of those historic men, but the skill of Peale, Stuart, Inman, and Sully. John Hancock's chair, and the table on which the immortal document was signed, stand on a dais at the eastern end; Rush's fine statue of Washington adorns the northwest corner, and the old chandelier used by the Continental Congress is still pendant from the centre of the ceiling.—The western chamber, for many years the Common Pleas Court room, is now a museum of historical relics. Of these it contains a large number both rare and curious. Among them are the ale mug of David Paul Jones; a china cup with Washington's effigy, made before Braddock's defeat; flag of the 1st Regiment Pennsylvania militia, lost and recaptured at Brandywine; the chair of James Logan, first possessed by William Penn, with the inscription, "Fruitful of recollections: sit and muse;" the chairs of Colonial justices; Franklin's bedside table; relics of the battle of Germantown; the original stamp imposed under the celebrated stamp act of Great Britian in March, 1765, which led to to the Revolution, and the original charter of Philadelphia.

Upon the second floor are two chambers now used by Select and Common Councils, the westernmost being formerly the Senate hall of the first Congress. The lobby extended then from this chamber to the eastern end of the building, and in it were confined the American officers captured by the British at the disastrous battle of Germantown. The original steeple, being decayed, was taken down in 1774, and the present one erected in 1828. On the ground-floor of the steeple, surrounded by a network of iron to prevent the ravages of relic-hunters, stands the famous old bell, hanging upon its original supports. It was cast and imported from England in 1752 purposely for the State House, but was cracked in testing it. It was recast by Isaac Norris, a member of the Colonial Assembly, who inscribed on it: "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." This old bell did, on the afternoon of the memorable 4th of July, 1776, proclaim that liberty which the Colonial Assembly had just declared. Subsequently it was again fractured, and is now sacredly guarded as an invaluable relic of our early national existence.—The Land We Live In.

A WHITEWASH THAT WILL DO FOR PAINT.—Slake a half bushel of unslaked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it, and add a peck of salt dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice put in boiling water, and boiled to a thin paste; one-half pound of powdered Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue, dissolved in warm water. Mix these well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used put it on as hot as possible with either painters' or whitewash brushes.

CHILDREN'S BEDS.—A child's bed should slope a little from the head to the foot so that the head may be a little higher than the feet; but never bend the neck to get the head on a pillow. This makes the child round shouldered, cramps the veins and arteries and interferes with the free circulation of the blood. Even when the child is several years old, the pillow should be thin, and made of hair, not of feathers.

MEAT LOAF.—Chop fine whatever cold meat you have, fat and lean together, add pepper, salt and a finely chopped onion, two slices of bread which have been soaked in milk, and one egg; mix well together and bake in a form.

Manhood: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published, a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of SPERMATORRHŒA or Seminal Weakness, Involuntary Seminal Losses, IMPOTENCY, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, &c.; also, CONSUMPTION, EPILEPSY and FITS, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance, etc.
Price, in a sealed envelope, only six cents.
The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from a thirty years' successful practice, that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately, and radically.
Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, on receipt of six cents, or two postage stamps. Address the Publishers,

CRAMPTON'S IMPERIAL SOAP
IS THE "BEST."
This soap is manufactured from pure materials, and as it contains a large percentage of Vegetable Oil, is warranted fully equal to the best imported Castile Soap, and at the same time possesses all the washing and cleansing properties of the celebrated German and French Laundry Soaps. It is therefore recommended for use in the Laundry, Kitchen, and Bath-room, and for general household purposes; also, for Printers, Painters, Engineers, and Machinists, as it will remove stains of Ink, Grease, Tar, Oil, Paint, etc., from the hands. Manufactured only by
